THE BIG LAZY

Lexington, Ky., named least active city in country; Chicago fares much better

Reuters

NEW YORK Although it's known for its beautiful horse farms and as the "Thoroughbred Capital of the World," Lexington, Ky., has gained a new distinction—as the most sedentary city in the U.S. Along with Indianapolis and Jackson, Miss., it ranked among the most exercise-phobic cities in the nation, according to a new ranking by Men's Health magazine.

Seattle, San Francisco and Oakland, Calif., were the most physically active. Chicago ranked toward the more active end of the spectrum, clocking in at 31 on an inactivity scale of one to 100.

"What hurt Lexington most was the actual amount of activity, or exercise, people reported engaging in—any physical activity at all, which was relatively low," said Matt Marion, an editor at Men's Health.

To compile the rankings of the 100 most sedentary cities featured in the latest issue that hit the newsstands Tuesday, the magazine looked at how often residents exercise, the number of households that watched 15 hours of cable TV a week and bought more than 11 video games a year, and the rate of DVT, a blood clot in a vein, usually in the leg, which is associated with inactivity.

"When we crunched the numbers Lexington finished at the bottom," Marion said.

Southern cities dominated the least active metropolises.

Tulsa, Okla., and Oklahoma City also scored a low grade, as did Birmingham, Ala.; Laredo, Texas; Nashville, Tenn.; Little Rock, Ark.; and Charleston, W.Va.

Marion suspects the Southern lifestyle and balmy weather could be contributing factors.

"In certain cities there is a more laid-back lifestyle. That's fine, but there is not that same drive you'll see in certain parts of the northeast or California, or the northwest where people get up every morning and run or hit the gym," he explained.

Residents of power-hub Washington, D.C.; Salt Lake City; Reno, Nev.; Portland, Ore.; Atlanta; Denver; and Minneapolis also were visiting the gym or pounding the pavement as each city scored top grades for being active.

"With the most active cities a common theme that runs through is there is a bit more body consciousness, a more youthful and body conscious sensibility in these cities," Marion said.

"And I think that equates to people making it a priority, no matter how busy, to get a run in or go for a walk."

Rated M for marijuana

The decriminalization of marijuana is gathering steam, from Connecticut reducing penalties for possession of small amounts of grass to the recently introduced House bill that would do the same on the federal level.

However, I have personally encountered the best-ever argument for legalizing pot, and it is the new Terrence Malick film, "The Tree of Life."

This is the Brad Pitt-Sean Penn movie about a boy growing up under a stern and uncompromising father in 1950s Texas, the inception of the universe and the rise of life on planet Earth, the end of the world, and humanity's small role in the barren chasm bracketing creation on every side—I think.

Having seen all of Malick's other films, I should have known going in that small amounts of decriminalized marijuana would almost be a necessity. After all, the proper way to watch narrative-light films such as the "The Thin Red Line" and "The New World" is to be high enough that a pit of drool collects in your lap and the potted plant your mom bought and which you've neglected to water properly, starts talking to you and begging for its life.

Likewise, "The Tree of Life" should not be viewed in any kind of normalized state. The AMC River East should have been selling hash with a movie ticket that doubles as rolling paper.

In the film's stranger moments, a beached plesiosaur mourns a fatal gash in its side, what appears to be the Fire of Life dances in mystic and untethered light, a dinosaur steps on another dinosaur's head, a mask floats along suspended in the sea, and the whole damn thing ends with a nice view of a bridge.

All I'm saying is that it is a coincidence the Global Commission on Drug Policy recently released a scathing report indicting the War on Drugs as a massive failure that has wasted billions of dollars while failing to curb the deleterious effects of drug addiction? Or that the commission advocated experimentation with legalizing and regulating drugs? Or did the commission, which included former U.N. Secretary-General Kofi Annan and Virgin CEO Richard Branson, simply know that "The Tree of Life" had a sweet 20-minute sequence in which astral bodies give way to the inevitable evolutionary march of born world?

"Kofi, hurry the hell up with the part about ending the stigmatization of nonviolent drug users," I picture Branson saying, "so we can eat this pot brownie and watch Brad Pitt teach his son how to hit him in the face to Alexandre Desplat's 'Light & Darkness.'"

I made a bet with a friend that marijuana would be as legal as alcohol in the next 10 years, but if Terrence Malick is going to keep making movies, we'll need to move that date forward ASAP.

Blago: This is a chance to teach daughters how to deal with tough times

WGN

A day after he was convicted of a string of corruption charges, a somber Rod Blagojevich spoke Tuesday of adversity and how he hopes he will be an example to his daughters "on how you deal with the tough times."

"A lot of what life is how you deal with adversities," the former governor told a crush of reporters outside his home. "It's a true test of who you are and it's an example to your children on how you deal with the tough times."

"And so, one of the things that motivates me and had motivated me and continues to motivate me—and [wife] Patti—is to try to show our kids that, as tough as things can get sometimes and as unfair as you think things might be, you just keep doing the best you can in dealing with the adversity."

"Through that adversity and hardship

THE APPEAL PROCESS

Rod Blagojevich and his lawyers have long complained that prosecutors and the judge in his two trials were fundamentally unfair, but after his sweeping corruption conviction Monday, only a successful appeal built on that belief stands between the former governor and a possible double-digit prison sentence.

can come good things."

Blagojevich's daughters are 8 and 14. After he was convicted Monday on 17 corruption charges, he told reporters at the courthouse that he and his wife "have to get home to our little girls and talk to them and explain things to them and then try to sort things out."

Blagojevich was found guilty of trying to sell or trade President Obama's old Senate seat and attempting to shake down executives for campaign cash.

The convictions carry a combined maximum prison sentence of around 300 years, but legal experts say a federal judge is likely to send him away for around a decade.

Meanwhile, Mayor Emanuel said Monday he paid little attention to the Blagojevich verdict, except for how the guilty findings and likely prison term will affect the former governor's family.

"The only thought I had, to tell you the truth, while obviously the jury has made their decision, I think we should all take one step back as it relates to the consequences to a wife and children," Emanuel said at an unrelated news conference at the Merchandise Mart.

Other than that consideration, the mayor said, he has been too focused on running the city to think about Blagojevich.

Ryan allowed to visit wife on her deathbed

Reuters

Lura Lynn Ryan, the wife of jailed former Gov. George Ryan, has died at age 76 with her husband at her side, officials said Tuesday.

Lura Lynn Ryan was at a hospital in Kankakee when she died at 10:40 p.m. local time Monday, according to Kankakee County Coroner Robert Gessner. She had suffered from lung cancer.

George Ryan is serving a six-and-a-half-year sentence in federal prison on corruption charges. His warden granted him a temporary release to be with his wife for her final hours, said one of Ryan's lawyers, former Gov. Jim Thompson. Ryan has been allowed to visit his wife of 55 years four times since January.

"It was a comfort to him and to their children," Thompson said. "They did not want to make the decision to take her off the respirator without him being present."

George Ryan, a Republican, had been nominated several times for a Nobel Peace Prize because of his opposition to the death penalty. He imposed a moratorium on executions in Illinois after 13 death row inmates were found to have been wrongly convicted. Illinois since has abolished the death penalty.

Ryan was convicted of racketeering, conspiracy, fraud and other offenses involving favoritism and kickbacks for state contracts and property leases.

A federal judge in December had denied Ryan's request to be freed from prison to attend to his ailing wife.

Thompson said Lura Lynn Ryan's devotion to her husband throughout his criminal proceedings was extraordinary.

"It was brave, it was courageous, both when he was on trial and during his appeals, and while he was in the penitentiary and trying to keep herself alive so she could be alive if and when he was released," Thompson said. "Finally in the end her body didn't keep up with her will."

Some Wrigley rooftops fail health inspections

Chicago Tribune

As the Cubs faced Milwaukee in Chicago recently, patrons at two Wrigley rooftops witnessed something even rarer than a Cubs victory this season: a health inspection.

Both businesses failed their June 16 inspections after officials discovered multiple violations, including "critical" problems that pose the highest risk to consumers.

The city found at least 12 violations at Beyond the Ivy, 1048 W. Waveland Ave., including food being stored at improper temperatures. At Brixen Ivy, 1044 W. Waveland, where at least eight violations were reported, officials observed workers wearing the same gloves to handle food, touch garbage cans and wipe their faces.

On Monday the city inspected Wrigleyville Rooftops, 1032 W. Waveland, which passed with conditions, and another Beyond the Ivy location at 1038 W. Waveland, which failed.

Health officials made the visits after the Tribune inquired about the frequency of inspections at the 16 Wrigleyville rooftops, which serve drinks and food to fans during Cubs games. On June 17, the newspaper reported that the establishments largely have escaped the eye of the city's health department, with records showing that 10 of the 16 rooftops had not been inspected since 2008.

City health officials acknowledge they have not been inspecting rooftops annually as required and say they plan to inspect all of them by the end of July.

Former NBA star Antoine Walker has pleaded guilty to passing bad checks in the form of unpaid gambling debts in Las Vegas. The Las Vegas Sun reports the former all-star, who attended Chicago's Mount Carmel High School, will be put on probation and work toward paying off $750,000.

Police: Man had gun on Mag Mile

A Chicago police commander was being credited Tuesday for his quick thinking a day earlier when he saw a large group of teens leaving Water Tower Place mall on the Magnificent Mile and found that a 19-year-old member of the group had a loaded handgun, police said.

Mariotti to stand trial

Former Sun-Times columnist and ESPN personality Jay Mariotti must stand trial on charges he stalked, injured and assaulted his ex-girlfriend. The Los Angeles County district attorney's office said Tuesday that a judge found there is enough evidence for Mariotti to face the charges. TRIBUNE

Believe it: @thepope is tweeting

Pope Benedict XVI used Twitter to announce the launch of a new Vatican website, timed to coincide with the 60th anniversary of his ordination as a priest.

The website, news.va, showed a photo of the pope with what appeared to be an iPad.

"The pope sent it, but it was prepared for him," said the Rev. Federico Lombardi, Benedict's spokesman. "The tablet was presented to him. He did the click and sent the tweet."

It was the pope's first tweet, Lombardi confirmed. He sent it from @news_va_en.

THE FIRST TWEET

Dear Friends, I just launched news.va. Praised be our Lord Jesus Christ! With my prayers and blessings, Benedictus XVI

The latest issue of Newsweek features a picture that imagines what Princess Diana would look like today, at age 50.

1 LOS ANGELES Princess Diana has returned from the grave on the cover of Newsweek in a picture that imagines her, and her life, as it might have been had she lived to mark her 50th birthday Friday.

But the picture and story—which speculates that Diana would have twice remarried, used Botox and been slightly jealous of new daughter-in-law Kate Middleton—provoked some howls of disgust as they arrived on U.S. newsstands the same week that Prince William and his new bride begin an official visit to North America.

"Shocking, brilliant or just plain cheap?" asked the Los Angeles Times. News blog mediaite.com called it "disrespectful on so many levels," while The Atlantic Wire ran the headline "How Creepy is Princess Diana's Ghost?"

Newsweek Editor-in-Chief Tina Brown, a Briton who wrote a gossipy 2007 biography about the late princess, imagines that if Diana had not died in a 1997 Paris car crash, she would have moved to New York, remained "great-looking," been friends with her ex-husband, Prince Charles, and his new wife (and Diana's old nemesis) Camilla, and have 10 million followers on Twitter.

But it's the digitally created cover photo of Diana—imagining her as still slim and chic, if a little wrinkled—that has caused the biggest outrage. Diana is shown walking alongside a smiling, and admiring, Kate Middleton.

"This is beyond tacky," one writer commented on New York Magazine's website.

"Ugh this is SO tasteless ... let the poor woman RIP ... if i were any of her family members i'd be so offended and upset by this," a woman wrote on the Newsweek comments page.

Some others said they were canceling their subscriptions.

FACEBOOK STATUS

The Newsweek feature also fantasizes about Diana's Facebook page, imagining her "liking" the movie "The King's Speech" and TV series "The Real Housewives of New York," hanging out with David and Victoria Beckham, and sending supportive messages to spiritual physician Deepak Chopra and Chinese dissident artist Ai Weiwei.

6 Taliban die in hotel attack

3 Six Taliban gunmen and suicide bombers attacked Kabul's Hotel Inter-Continental in a carefully orchestrated operation that began Tuesday night and went into Wednesday, ending with their deaths some six hours later. Two police were wounded in the attack; the number of civilian casualties was not clear, an official said.

China counts poo(ing) bears

4 China will use analysis of panda droppings as it embarks upon a once-in-a-decade census of the endangered animal, state media said Monday. Authorities are training some 70 trackers in southwestern China who will begin their work this week and end the survey by late July, Xinhua news agency said.

Greek protest turns violent

5 Greek riot police fired tear gas to disperse stone-throwing demonstrators Tuesday in Athens as thousands rallied to protest proposed austerity measures on the first day of a two-day strike. Twenty-one police officers and one demonstrator were hurt, and at least five people have been arrested, police said.

Google vs. Facebook

6 Google unveiled its new social networking service, Google+, on Tuesday. The service is designed to tie together all of Google's online properties, laying the foundation for a full-fledged social network. Google+, now available for testing, is similar to Facebook, with profile pictures and news-feeds forming a central core.

THE DIGIT $9 million

That's the value of the drugs found in a 2005 Nissan Armada that was pulled over Friday during a routine traffic stop in Maricopa, Ariz., officials said Tuesday.

Traded Troy Brouwer says Blackhawks players 'frustrated' with team's moves

RedEye

Blackhawks fans frustrated with another season of big changes to the Stanley Cup-winning team might not be alone.

If you believe just-traded winger Troy Brouwer, players still donning a Blackhawks sweater are frustrated too.

"I kind of thought they would make more of an effort to try and keep the team together, but obviously that's not the case," Brouwer said on The Score-670's "The Danny Mac Show." "And I've talked to a couple of guys on the Blackhawks currently that are a little frustrated with how everything is going."

"But that's the direction that the team is going in right now and [general manager Stan Bowman] is going to do what is best for his hockey club. You still have the core group of guys there ... and I think they are going to be a good hockey team next year as well."

That last statement is what most Blackhawks fans cling to. Brian Campbell, Tomas Kopecky and Troy Brouwer are the latest to go, but Jonathan Toews, Patrick Kane, Patrick Sharp, Marian Hossa, Corey Crawford, Duncan Keith, Brent Seabrook, etc., are still here.

And there might be other semi-big names added starting Friday. That's when the NHL's free-agency period begins, and the Blackhawks have some money to spend on players who just might make fans forget about the recent departures.

Is there a Marian Hossa move, a la two offseasons ago, imminent? Most likely no.

But there will be new faces—again. Not only free agents, but Rockford IceHogs who are ready to take their talents to the United Center. TRIBUNE CONTRIBUTED

BASEBALL FROM BOTH SIDES OF TOWN.

Should slumping, high-paid players still start?

south side

SOXMAN
twitter.com/
thesoxman72

There's a certain South Side player who's hearing more boos lately than a child walking through a house haunted by 35,000 ghosts.

Adam Dunn's four-year, $56 million contract he signed in the offseason came with high expectations that have hardly been met—so far. A player who is striking out in about 40 percent of his at-bats while posting a .487 on-base plus slugging percentage at home would earn a one-way ticket to AAA anywhere else. Still, Dunn remains in the lineup nearly every day, acting more like a breezy oscillating fan than a slugger. Why not call on AAA talent like Dayan Viciedo? Because the Sox are still betting No. 32 can follow the words of his walk-up song and "Turn the Page" on his slump.

If you think Dunn can find his swing in the minors, then I have a championship-caliber team on the North Side I can sell you. READ SOXMAN'S MUSINGS AT TWITTER.COM/THESOXMANT72.

JULIE DICARO
twitter.com/
aerysports

Starting overpaid, slumping players is all part of the Cubs' master plan.

You see, the Cubs' philosophy is to be proud of shunning advanced statistics. This way, the front office isn't distracted by minor, objective details like an aging player's declining offense or inability to get on base. This frees up the front office to give aging sluggers eight-year contracts or to pay mediocre outfielders $12 million per season.

The point of all of this is to force the manager to keep starting the slumping players, so the team feels as if it's getting a return on the investment. This creates a logjam of young players who can't be promoted because there is no position available for them. This, in turn, gives Cubs minor-league instructors enough time to mess up the youngsters' swings or ruin their pitching mechanics so they can be traded for next to nothing. And that is the secret to 103 years of success. READ JULIE DICARO'S CUBS BLOG AT AERYSPORTS.COM/A-LEAGUE-OF-HER-OWN.

1 Who might the Blackhawks part with next?	Stanley Cup.	Hopefully not my homeboy Byfug—wait. Or my dude Tomas Kope—crap. Uh, is Jim Cornelison still there?	Ninety percent of the city's puck bunnies, who are devastated about Kopecky's trade.	If it involves the Ice Crew girls, we'll make the Vancouver riots look like a block party.	Tommy Hawk. Cut him loose.
2 What chance do you give of the NBA avoiding Friday's lockout?	No chance. This is what happens when a Maverick wins.	About as good of a chance as me avoiding drunk-texting that girl I met last weekend. It's gonna happen, y'all.	100 percent. How can LeBron James wake up and still be LeBron James if there's a lockout?	No worse than Blago's chances of keeping Bubba away from him at shower time.	Put it this way: My dad's a locksmith and David Stern told him to keep the next six months wide open.
3 What will it be like with Vancouver as the Chicago Wolves' affiliate?	It will be a riot.	Like seeing your little brother start dating your ex. Your Canadian ex. Ewwwwwwwww.	Loads of fun, assuming Roberto Luongo gets injured and has to make a rehab start.	Expect the number of greasy, finger-biting goons at Chicago bars to double.	"Riot Night" will become the all-time most successful promotional campaign in sports history.
4 What's Wimbledon gonna be like now that the Williams sisters are out?	Unless they change their names to "Kate" and "Pippa," this is not news.	Not as attractive, that's for damn sure.	Less bouncy. Sports bras are your friends, girls.	Dammit. Now where am I gonna set my beer down?	Can Prince William and Prince Harry replace them?
5 How can you tell the women's World Cup has begun?	The tournament is starting to shape up.	I wore my Brandi Chastain tribute sports bra to work. What? It's got dope underwire.	The United States is playing really good soccer for once.	ESPN dusts off Brandi Chastain's sports bra and crams it down our throats.	I wore a sports bra to work.

U.S. women start World Cup with shutout of North Korea

No sports bras were bared, but the U.S. women got the job done in their World Cup opener Tuesday.

The top-ranked Americans beat North Korea 2-0 in their Group C opener with Lauren Cheney and Rachel Buehler leading the way in the second half.

Cheney completed a swift move with a well-timed header and Buehler scored with 14 minutes to go to seal the win.

"You play your first 45 minutes in a World Cup, and after those 45 you start knocking the ball around a bit better. We did a good job," U.S. coach Pia Sundhage said. "It's good to have this result because it is so much easier going forward."

On a sun-drenched afternoon in Dresden, Germany, the Americans looked livelier from the start and Carli Lloyd had an early chance when she connected with a Christie Rampone free kick, but her header was too weak to trouble goalie Hong Myong Hui.

American goalkeeper Hope Solo had to come to the rescue twice late in the first half, palming away a Korean shot and intercepting a low cross from Song Jong-Sun.

In the other Group C match of the day, Sweden beat Colombia 1-0.

GAME PLANNER

» Tiger Woods says he is making progress in his recovery from injuries to his left leg, although he has no idea when he will return to golf. Woods did not say whether he would compete in the British Open, which starts July 14 at Royal St. George's.

» Maria Sharapova looked like a champion under the Centre Court roof at Wimbledon, advancing to the semifinals at the All England Club for the first time since 2006 with a 6-1, 6-1 win Tuesday over Dominika Cibulkova.

Winner is served

By Matt Pais

You nominated tons of local candidates for our first contest to find Chicago's hottest servers. We narrowed them to 10 men and 10 women, and now, after three intense rounds of voting, you've chosen the most eye-catching folks waiting on you in the city. Read on to learn more about them.

MATT PAIS IS THE METROMIX MUSIC AND MOVIES PRODUCER. MPAIS@TRIBUNE.COM | @MATTPAIS

CHICAGO'S HOTTEST WAITER: BRAD FRY, 25, OF BUCKTOWN

Has worked at The Southern (1840 W. North Ave.) for just over a year

His ambitions for the future: Fry, who started acting in high school and graduated from Columbia College, has done primarily commercial work and has a feature coming out this Halloween called "House of Purgatory."

At the Southern, Brad Fry did receive some good-natured joshing about his nomination as Chicago's hottest waiter.

"I was putting in some plants for them," Fry said. "My chef and the owner came out and they said, 'You know, we need a really hot bartender to come out here. Can you take your shirt off while you're doing all this gardening?'"

Fry didn't do it—"It was freezing [outside]"—but he's got the last laugh, now that he's taken home the title.

How did you get out the vote for the contest?

Oh my God, everything. Twitter, Facebook, email, word of mouth. I was actually on vacation during the entire final round and the end of the second round so I didn't really have a chance to do much voting. I had support from fans that were getting everybody involved. A lot of people in my town [Jerseyville, Ill.] were voting multiple times so that was pretty neat to have everybody doing that for me. ... My girlfriend's mother, she was nonstop for about a day just voting and voting.

What are you going to do to celebrate your win?

I had some friends in town last night and around midnight when they said "I think you've got it," we had some drinks. They were in town for the parade and the Taste. I may go out to dinner at a Boka group restaurant.

Do you have a message for your constituency?

[Laughs.] I guess just smile and enjoy your job. ... [The contest] started off as just a joke, and then when I started to get as many people involved it was like, "Well, I don't want to let everybody down and lose this thing."

LENNY GILMORE/REDEYE

CHICAGO'S HOTTEST WAITRESS: AMBER JAMES, 26, OF WRIGLEYVILLE

Has worked at Timothy O'Toole's (622 N. Fairbanks Court) for 2½ years

A fun fact about her: I'm pretty much a big nerd. I like "Glee." Everyone makes fun of me there. I'm always jumping around, singing, dancing. Everyone's like, "You have too much energy." I'm pretty much a nerd at heart. ... I'm a Cubs fan, Bears fan. Not a Sox fan, though.

Think Chicago's hottest waitress winner Amber James is one of those good-looking people who can't see beyond her nose? Not quite. Currently she's in Mississippi, helping out with Habitat for Humanity.

"It's almost my way of relaxing," she said. "Even though I'm working really hard and I'm sweating right now 'cause it's so hot out. But it's like my way of relaxing 'cause I don't have my cellphone, my computer, I don't have all the gossip that's going on at work. I just don't want to hear it. I'm just like, 'I'm here, and I'm helping someone else.'"

So, what will be on your agenda for the next year as Chicago's hottest waitress?

Just continuing being friendly and continuing getting regulars into O'Toole's as much as possible.

What did you do to get out the vote?

It's been fun going up to my regulars and stuff. Like, "Hey, will you vote for me?" I was telling 'em what was going on, and we had it on the O'Toole's website and I put it on my Facebook of course. A lot of my friends helped me out, too, and my family. They put it on their Facebook, and then I know my mom helped me out. She was sending it out to my family who don't have Facebook.

What reactions did you get from people at work?

A lot of 'em were joking around, and a lot of my friends were like, "You got this, you got this." No one was judging me for it or anything. [Laughs.] I think it's just all in fun.

FOOD FIGHT

SETTLING DELICIOUS, AGE-OLD DISAGREEMENTS ONE ARGUMENT AT A TIME

Some like their pizza cut in squares, while others swear by slices. For as long as we've been stuffing our faces with delicious food, there have been conflicts about the way we eat it. Addressing such fervent foodie issues, we bring you Food Fight.

This week: What's your take on Taste of Chicago?

JASON LITTLE FOR METROMIX

LOVE IT

OK, Taste snobs, what exactly are you complaining about? You don't like free concerts? Tons of different kinds of delicious food from all different parts of the city, all within walking distance? You don't like huge parties that anyone in Chicago can come to? You don't like relaxing on the grass in Grant Park with a drink, soaking in the summer the way God and former Mayor Richard M. Daley intended? Fine, leave it to the rest of us. —GEORGIA GARVEY

HATE IT

I avoid Taste of Chicago because I value life. Last year was the first and last time I went. I was nearly run over by 12 strollers and got tangled with three kids on leashes. Is dying really worth eating small portions of overpriced food? I think not. If that weren't enough, I discovered that there is limited seating, meaning you'll have to eat standing. Eat standing? What are we, animals? I guess humans are animals, but ones that shouldn't have to risk life and limb to eat outside at a summer food fest. —ALEX BENSON

[Bleeped] Up

July 2 at Lincoln Hall

Despite saddling themselves with an unprintable name, these Canadian rockers delivered an early contender for best album of the year with the raucous punk opera "David Comes to Life."

U2

July 5 at Soldier Field

The anthemic Irish rockers finally make their stadium return with front-man Bono now fully recovered from last year's emergency back surgery.

Tinariwen

July 7 at Lincoln Hall

Originating from the Sahara region of Northern Mali, this well-traveled crew specializes in hypnotic desert blues.

Flaming Lips July 7-8 at Aragon Ballroom

Expect the psych-pop quintet to employ copious amounts of confetti, fake blood and strobe lighting when ringleader Wayne Coyne brings the Lips' traveling circus to Chicago for a pair of shows.

Britney Spears and Nicki Minaj

July 8 at United Center

This concert pairs a onetime pop icon (Spears) who can no longer be bothered to sing or dance when she performs live with an energetic MC (Minaj) who attacks the stage like a hungry lioness.

20 CAN'T-MISS CONCERTS

By Andy Downing

As July rolls in, Chicago's summer festival season kicks into gear with the return of one much-loved standby (Pitchfork Music Festival) and a newborn fest making its highly anticipated debut (Dave Matthews Band Caravan). In addition, music fans can look forward to appearances from an array of bearded folkies (Bon Iver, William Elliott Whitmore) and explosive, guitar-driven rock bands such as [Bleeped] Up and Wild Flag. (Full event info and 10 more hot shows at metromix.com.)

Katy Perry July 8 at Allstate Arena

Offstage, the pop pinup revels in playing the goofball, but her robotic vocals and by-the-numbers music lack similar personality.

Dave Matthews Band Caravan

July 8-10, lakeside

The latest addition to Chicago's summer festival season brings the likes of Sharon Jones & the Dap-Kings, the Drive-By Truckers and, yes, Matthews himself, to the South Side lakefront.

Pitchfork Music Festival July 15-17 at Union Park

The tastemaking website takes over Union Park for three days of music highlighted by performances from Fleet Foxes, TV on the Radio and controversial hip-hop collective Odd Future.

The grunge-era hard rockers, who reunited in 2010 after a lengthy split, currently are working on material with an eye on releasing a new album in 2012.

Jennifer Hudson July 16 at Ravinia Festival

The Chicago soul/R&B belter, whose pipes remain out-sized despite her slimmed-down figure, performs here behind her 2011 album "I Remember Me."

Blonde RedheadJuly 18 at Pritzker Pavilion*

The NYC trio favors swirling guitar jams and hazy songs drifting in like thick clouds of buzzing mosquitoes.

Wild FlagJuly 22 at Subterranean*

A who's who of powerhouse musicians, including former Sleater-Kinney members Carrie Brownstein and Janet Weiss, and ex-Helium front-woman Mary Timony.

Ted Leo & the PharmacistsJuly 25 at Pritzker Pavilion*

Melodic punk Ted Leo has been touring solo for a while now, so expect him to enjoy cutting loose with his mates.

Torche July 28 at Bottom Lounge

These artful Miami hard rockers specialize in sludgy guitar outbursts that rev like backfiring bulldozers.

William Elliott WhitmoreJuly 29 at Lincoln Hall*

His fifth album, "Field Songs," weaves together eight simple tales that sound almost weightless against his death-obsessed early material.

Paul McCartneyJuly 31 at Wrigley Field*

With the Cubs mired in yet another losing season, this solo appearance from Sir Paul might inspire the lone cheers to emanate from the North Side ballpark.

Jill ScottJuly 31 at Charter One Pavilion*

The eminently likable R&B/soul singer delivers her words with restraint and grace.

Celebrate through the Fourth with free theater and comedy

By Julia Borcherts

Sure there are plenty of traditional—and free—ways to celebrate Independence Day. But when you've had your fill of hot dog-eating contests and renditions of "The Star-Spangled Banner," overthrow your repressed budget and liberate your wallet from the constraints of ticket prices and cover charges at this parade (so to speak) of free theater and comedy shows.

WEDNESDAY

A tripleheader of free laughs starts at 8 p.m. with Rec League, a double bill of short-form improv by training center alums and current students, followed by Battle-Prov at 9 p.m., when students face off in an improv contest against visiting troupe Computer and audience votes determine the winning team. At 10 p.m., join the comedians and host Kevin Pomeroy onstage for interactive improv games. All that chuckling make you thirsty? Grab a Miller beer for $2.

SUNDAY

India's Independence Day from British rule isn't celebrated until Aug. 15, but as part of the International Voices Project (773-250-7055), Rasaka Theatre Company performs a concert reading of this ancient (meaning way before British rule began in 1858) Sanskrit comedy about medieval Indian social life, which features a love triangle, palace intrigue, mistaken identities and thieves. And more freebies abound—after the show, sample regional snacks at a post-show reception.

Radio Goggles

MONDAY

In true "by the people, for the people" fashion, Oracle Theatre serves up an entire season of free theater, including this re-creation of episodes from three vintage radio shows—Raymond Chandler's hardboiled whodunit, "The Adventures of Philip Marlowe," Lucille Ball's comedic "My Favorite Husband" and the "Gunsmoke" westerns. Strap on a pair of authentic "radio goggles" and settle in as the shows are broadcast over a sound system while actors pantomime, lip-synch and shadow-play along with the action. Also runs Fridays and Saturdays.

WELCOME TO...

MIDDLETOWN

By: WILL ENO Directed By: LES WATERS

Mary Swanson just moved to Middletown, eager to start a family and enjoy the neighborly bonds a small town promises. But when Mary befriends resident John Dodge, she is quick to discover that below Middletown's flinchingly honest exterior lies something much more complex. Middletown is a wry, human portrait of a town with two lives, one ordinary and visible, the other epic and mysterious.

MAKING THE MOST OF THE 'TRANSFORMERS' INVASION

about last night

LUIS GOMEZ
lgomez
@tribune.com

What do you do if your assignment is to cover the two-month filming of "Transformers: Dark of the Moon" in downtown Chicago—from where and what they filmed to what the cast has to say about filming here—but access and answers prove difficult to come by?

I covered filming from a mostly outsider point of view. Well, an outsider who needed to find something to write about for the next day's newspaper whether he had access or not.

I watched the filming on LaSalle Street from behind a barricade a block away and got bossed around by security just like everyone else. I watched them shoot on Michigan Avenue and then Wacker Drive from nearby buildings, like many others who worked in the area.

I did see actors Shia LaBeouf and Rosie Huntington-Whiteley in a River North nightclub kitchen, quite accidentally, when the two stars were taking a break from the film's cast and crew party at the club to have a smoke by the kitchen door. It would be the last time I would be in the same room with the two actors, but my "Transformers" experience was just getting started.

JULY 10

The first day of filming closed down part of LaSalle in the Financial District. My first real glimpse of filming came about an hour or two after arriving at 8 a.m., when the film's famous cars raced up LaSalle several times. In order to return to their starting point, the cars circled around the block and in my direction. I pulled out my camera and filmed them as they drove by me. More than 100,000 hits later, after I uploaded the footage, Paramount Pictures had YouTube take it down. I never got an explanation other than the message "This video is no longer available due to a copyright claim by Paramount Pictures Corporation."

JULY 16

With the city's help, "Transformers" shut down part of Michigan Avenue over this weekend. Crowds were kept far from the action while director Michael Bay and Co. turned the photogenic street into a disaster zone (cars on the set were flipped over and uglified with fake dirt and rubble, including 10 or so that sat in a pile just in front of the north side of the bridge). Security would have kept me away from the junkyard-looking set too if it weren't for the fact that the set was next to Tribune Tower.

I got a brief exclusive from star Josh Duhamel—who was sporting all-black military gear in temperatures in the high 80s—as he signed autographs and posed for pictures with fans: I asked how he was dealing with the heat, he told me "It was good under the tree" and ... well, that was it.

What? I said it was brief.

JULY 17

To get the best view of the action, I would enter and exit the Tribune several times throughout the day. It paid off when I was stopped on my way back up the Tribune elevators so the movie could film a scene involving Tyrese Gibson's character and his military unit in our lobby.

Earlier that day, then-Mayor Richard M. Daley visited the Michigan Avenue set to view the wreckage and meet with Bay. He didn't get to watch the basejumpers leap off the 92-story Trump Tower onto North Wacker Drive, but he did witness a loud, fireball-heavy scene next to the bridge from a nearby curb.

I watched it from a corner conference room on the Tribune's fourth floor facing Michigan and filmed it with the video feature on my camera. The clip couldn't have been that good: Paramount never took it down.

JULY 18

It got so boring during a rain delay in filming, I took a photo of LaBeouf doing pushups in Pioneer Court and tweeted it. I know it sounds stalkerish, but the truth is ... OK, that's exactly what it was. After the rain delay, the crew began setting up for what promised to be an impressive stunt—which happened about an hour later. An explosion went off and cars went spiraling out of control north on Michigan, which appears to be a scene in the movie trailer.

WHERE THEY SHOT

It's been almost a year since the cast and crew of "Transformers: Dark of the Moon" wreaked havoc on Chicago. Fireballs shooting down Michigan Avenue, jumpers flinging themselves off Trump Tower and loud gunbattles along Wacker Drive became normal occurrences between July 10 and Sept. 1. Here's a look at some of the filming locations.

1. LaSalle Street Financial District (LaSalle: Jackson to Randolph)
2. Michigan Avenue bridge
3. Tribune Tower (435 N. Michigan Ave.)
4. 35 E. Wacker Building
5. Willis Tower (233 S. Wacker Drive)
6. Trump Tower (401 N. Wabash Ave.)
7. Lake Shore East Park (South Water St. & Field Blvd)
8. Hotel 71 (71 E. Wacker)
9. 155 N. Wacker Drive building
10. Old Post Office (433 W. Van Buren St.)
11. 171 N. Wabash Ave. (at Benton Place)
12. Rosenwald Apartments (4620 S. Michigan Ave.)
13. McCormick Place

'Transformers: Dark of the Moon' (PG-13)

Sam (Shia LaBeouf) sure complains a lot for a guy who somehow landed gorgeous, vastly supportive Carly (better-than-expected Rosie Huntington-Whiteley), whose lips are perpetually locked in a pucker. Of course, the dull romantic woes of puny humans pale in contrast to another clash between the Autobots and Decepticons that could mean the end of the world, which is pretty much always what's at stake.

The buzz: Even director Michael Bay acknowledged the suckiness of "Transformers: Revenge of the Fallen," yet he thinks writer Ehren Kruger (who worked on "Revenge of the Fallen" and wrote "Scream 3") can recapture the first movie's fun? Fortunately Chicago viewers get the bonus of enjoying the climactic action sequence shot here last summer, which lasts so long on screen you'll think the bars have opened, closed, opened, closed and opened again.

The verdict: The Transformers really need to shut up. They're either annoying little pests or gigantic blowhards, and neither works. Also not working: overbearing explanations of the mindless plot and CGI effects that are huge, but neither grand nor coherent. This stupidly repetitive movie features a few crazy-awesome special effects tricks but takes forever to get going—and then refuses to stop once Chicago starts crumbling. I spent less time marveling and more time thinking, "Well, at least my favorite Corner Bakery on Wacker wasn't harmed."

Cars explode into the air during filming on East Wacker Drive on July 21.

JULY 19

Filming moved to Wacker that Monday. The scene I witnessed featured military men coming out of their hiding spots, including a flipped-over CTA bus, with guns blazing and explosions going off around them. The guns and explosions were so loud that Corner Bakery's windows rattled. Once the 30-second scene was over, customers clapped and cheered because, well, what else are you supposed to do?

JULY 25

When I caught up with Bay on the set at Wacker and Wabash, he cracked jokes about the giant piece of foam that had hit him during a scene, as well as about the women who had been flashing the set from nearby buildings. Meanwhile, I could see my old pal Shia and co-star Patrick Dempsey on top of what appeared to be building remnants waiting for Bay's signal to continue their scene. Bay shouted "OK guys! Let's go!" and the scene with Even Stevens and McDreamy began. @ABOUTLUISGOMEZ

Woman injured during stunt still recovering

Cedillo

Chicago Tribune

The “Transformers: Dark of the Moon” film crew transformed local landmarks into spectacular rubble last summer, but the carnage for one Chicago-area woman was all too real.

Little Village native Gabriela Cedillo, 25, still is recovering from traumatic brain injuries she suffered during a stunt for the film Sept. 1, just over the state line in Hammond, Ind. Cedillo was working as an extra when a cable pulling another car broke loose and smashed through the windshield of her Scion, hitting her in the head, according to an Indiana Occupational Safety and Health Administration report.

The scene in which Cedillo was injured was among the last filmed in the Chicago area—Paramount Pictures closed the set immediately after the accident and ended filming in the region the next day, though it had scheduled three more shooting days with the Chicago Film Office. The movie hits theaters

Wednesday.

After multiple surgeries and months of physical therapy, Cedillo is living with family in suburban Brookfield. The aspiring actress remains partially paralyzed on her left side and has yet to receive any money toward her six-figure medical bills from the film’s production company, Paramount, her attorney said. Cedillo’s family in October filed a lawsuit against Paramount and several companies involved in the production.

Cedillo, who worked as a bank teller before the accident, now has trouble speaking and faces dim prospects for recovery, her attorney said. Her family declined to talk to a reporter.

“She has gotten to a point where she is aware of [media coverage], and they don’t want her to be upset by it,” said Cedillo’s lawyer, Todd Smith.

Asked whether Paramount had paid for any of Cedillo’s medical expenses, a company spokesman responded via email Tuesday: “This was a tragic accident and our thoughts and prayers are with Gabriela and her family. The family is not discussing the matter publicly, and we respect their privacy.”

Christopher W. Ferrone, senior mechanical engineer at ARCCA Inc., who reviewed the accident that resulted in Gabriela Cedillo’s massive head injury on the set of “Transformers: Dark of the Moon,” speaks about his findings during an October news conference in Chicago.

SUMMER SLIM DOWN

WHICH CELEBS ARE ROCKING THEIR NEW, IMPROVED BEACH BODS?

By Ariel
Alexovich
REDEYE

We take our jobs seriously here at RedEye, and we appreciate when celebrities do the same. Naturally, we're referring to their very important job of looking hot. Their sculpted bods help make up for all the atrocities we're subject to at North Avenue Beach. So, take a (nice, long) look at these celebs who've toned up recently. But be warned—there's one extreme exception. ARIEL@TRIBUNE.COM | @MISSARIEL

JORDIN SPARKS

The singer revealed her 30-pound weight loss in a Twitpic of herself in a bikini last month. Now, she tells Shape magazine she was just feelin' really groovy that day and wanted to share: "I like what I see in the mirror. I liked what I saw in the mirror before. It just didn't work in a bikini."

SNOOKI

Is the pint-sized "Jersey Shore" gal striving for teaspoon-size? Snooks has been talking about slimming down since spring, when she told People she was scared to film in Italy because of all the carb-alicious spaghetti around. Now back in New Jersey, she was spotted leaving a gym Monday with JWovw and Sammi Sweetheart.

SHERRI SHEPHERD

"The View" co-host told People she wants to slim down for her upcoming wedding, even incorporating exercise into her big day. Shepherd said she made her bridesmaids—who include Elisabeth Hasselbeck and Niecy Nash—rehearse a choreographed dance for eight hours. "Everybody threw out their back," Shepherd said.

JASON SEGEL

What inspired the "Bad Teacher" star to drop 30 pounds? An unflattering photo his assistant took that showed Segel passed out covered in Taco Bell wrappers. He shared the pic on "The Late Show with David Letterman," to which Letterman replied, "Honest to God, Jason, this looks like a crime scene."

ROB MCELHENNEY

Fat = funny? The usually trim star of "It's Always Sunny in Philadelphia" surprised audiences at the recent Critics' Choice Television Awards when he showed up some 50 pounds heavier, reportedly to bring some new jokes to Season 7 of the raunchy sitcom. "It's been disgusting to watch him go through with this adventure," co-star Charlie Day told screenjunkies.com.

ONE LUCKY GUY

Lucas

Shia LaBeouf isn't shy about spilling the beans on past relationships, if a recent interview he gave Details magazine is any indication. Apparently the "Transformers" star bragged about hooking up with co-star Megan Fox (who dated current hubby Brian Austin Green for years). He also claimed to have had a "disastrous" fling with Isabel Lucas (who was with Adrien Grenier at the time). Shia, a gentleman never kisses and tells!

America the beautiful

It was a day to celebrate America—and her longtime boyfriend. America Ferrera married Ryan Piers Williams (above) on Monday at her former co-star Vanessa Williams' home. Us Weekly reported that another former co-star, Judith Light, officiated the ceremony. Also attending were Amber Tamblyn and Blake Lively, Ferrera's co-stars from the movie "Sisterhood of the Traveling Pants." GETTY IMAGES FILE PHOTO

Claw and order

Take a good look at the "claw" when U2 performs at Soldier Field on Tuesday—the band is retiring the stage when the tour ends at the end of July, billboard.com reports. The band is in negotiations to sell three of the 29,000-square-foot steel structures as stand-alone venues, the 360 Tour director said. We're guessing it's a little out of our price range.

Grammer lesson

Chicago's newest boss—Kelsey Grammer, not Rahm Emanuel—will sing the seventh-inning stretch

Wednesday at Wrigley Field, according to WGN. Grammer's been all over town lately filming the upcoming series "Boss."

Will.you.are

If you've always wanted to be glamorous like Fergie—and who among us hasn't?—there is some good news. Video game publisher Ubisoft announced Monday it is developing "The Black Eyed Peas Experience," a dance game for the Xbox 360 and Nintendo Wii. The company didn't give a release date, but we gotta feeling it will be soon.

HOT DATE

June 30

That's when Pittsburgh will hold a rally to honor Steelers receiver Hines Ward for his "Dancing With the Stars" victory, according to the Pittsburgh Post-Gazette. We'd make a joke, but clearly the Steel City is having some self-esteem issues right now.
